

Boaters: Marina delay wastes time, money

Town Council pushes back construction on voter-approved public marina to fiscal 2019

BY PATRICK LUCE

pluce@eastbaynewspapers.com

When voters approved a $17 million bond referendum last November, it included $2 million to build a new public marina to help curtail the long waiting list of boaters seeking a public place to tie up their vessels. That project has been put on the back burner for the time being, angering some of those who had pushed for its approval.

The Bristol Town Council, faced with a bevy of capital projects to prioritize, recently approved a five-year Capital Improvements Program that spells out when planned projects should begin. The plan divides each year's projects into four levels of priority — "Urgent," and Priority 1-3 — which is not necessarily a directive to the town, but more of a guideline, according to Town Council Chairman Nathan Calouro.

The plan begins at the start of fiscal 2018, or July 1 of this year, with "urgent" Town Hall renovations, a fire engine replacement, a new

Overtime and details propel cops to top earners

Eight of top 10 Bristol salaries are in police department; town middle of pack in pay statewide

pluce@eastbaynewspapers.com

Bristol's 10 highest-paid employees last year earned an average of $110,000, according to numbers from the town finance office. Owing to overtime and detail pay, most of the top earners work in the Bristol Police Department.

Despite the six-figure salaries of some employees after overtime is factored in, overall Bristol ranks about in the middle of cities and towns throughout the state in the amount paid to key municipal employees.

Seven of the top 10 earning municipal employees are patrolmen or sergeants with the Bristol Police Department. Sgt. Michael Vieira earned a total of $139,668, more than doubling his base salary of $64,846. Sgt. Paul Medeiros also doubled his salary, earning $128,518 with the same base pay.

The increase in income is due to overtime hours and detail work — directing traffic during road construction projects or working security during large public events, for example. Contractors typically reimburse the town for an officer's detail pay on projects not directly conducted by the town. The number of overtime and detail hours patrolmen and sergeants worked was not readily available in the Police Department or town finance offices. Capt. Brian Burke noted that officers provide protection for the public and the workers on a road project. Officers often volunteer for the work, but are sometimes ordered to do so, especially in the case of large projects that could pose a hazard.

Police Chief Josue Canario was third on the list in 2016, earning $111,982, followed by five more department employees. (See the full list at right). The only non-police employees on the top 10 list are Finance Director Julie Goucher at $103,275 and Public Works Director Kevin McBride, who earned $102,365.

Town Administrator Steven Contente said the town makes a concerted effort to maintain reasonable salaries to support a tight budget while also rewarding good work and being able to attract top talent.

"I have a real tough budget; I think we have to consider a number of factors," said Mr. Contente, himself among the lowest-paid top municipal administrators in the state. "Salary should go hand-in-hand with effectiveness. There are some areas where we are high. I'd like to be in line with other towns."

Gallison expected to plead guilty Thursday

The former Bristol state representative faces at least two years in prison for nine felony counts

BY PATRICK LUCE

pluce@eastbaynewspapers.com

RICHARD W. DIONNE JR.

Former state Rep. Ray Gallison leaves the federal courthouse in Providence after his arraignment in January. He is expected to plead guilty to nine federal felonies Thursday.

Former State Rep. Ray Gallison is due back in court Thursday, and is expected to plead guilty to nine federal felonies.

The disgraced former legislator was arraigned Jan. 27 on the charges — aggravated identity theft, mail fraud, wire fraud (four counts) and federal tax violations (three counts) for under-reporting his income and assisting with the filing of a false tax document. At the time, Magistrate Judge Patricia Sullivan recorded a not-guilty plea, as is standard practice. It was widely expected Mr. Gallison would change his plea to guilty on all nine charges Thursday. He is due in federal court in Providence before Chief Judge William Smith at 3 p.m.

It is unknown whether Judge Smith will sentence Mr. Gallison Thursday. He faces a minimum of two years in federal prison on the aggravated identity theft charge. U.S. Attorney Peter Neronha and RI Attorney General Peter Kilmartin have both said they will encourage Judge Smith to tack more years onto the sentence.

In the meantime, Mr. Gallison remains free on $50,000 bond. He surrendered his passport and is prohibited from traveling outside Rhode Island or Massachusetts as a condition of his bail.

Mr. Gallison allegedly stole money from the estate of Ray Medley, a Barrington man who died in 2012 and had named Mr. Gallison executor of his will. Much of the money was supposed to be disbursed among a handful of non-profit organizations. Instead, much of it went into Mr. Gallison's own account, according to the charges against him.

The U.S. attorney also said Mr. Gallison used Medley's credit card to buy personal items, transferred money into his own personal account, sold items to a Fall River pawn shop, sold a car to a "family member" and kept the money, stole car and home insurance dividend checks, and stole dividends on stocks totaling more than $116,000.

He also allegedly filed false tax returns that failed to account for his ill-gotten gains, and assisted an associate in doing the same.

In addition to a prison term, Mr. Gallison will be ordered to make full restitution of about $670,000, much of which was recovered when he delivered about $500,000 worth of stocks and bonds he was holding to Warren attorney Tucker Wright, who now represents Mr. Medley's estate. Another $100,000 of restitution will be due at the time of Mr. Gallison's sentencing, which has not yet been scheduled. Payment arrangements will be made for the remaining $60,000.

Local students to walk in Roger Williams' footsteps

RWU freshmen travel to England to learn what shaped their school's namesake

BY PATRICK LUCE
pluce@eastbaynewspapers.com

RICHARD W. DIONNE JR.

heretics were regularly put to death," Ms. Carrington-Farmer said. "He saw where religion and state intertwined. And people died."

Ms. Carrington-Farmer and National Park Service Ranger John McNiff, who works at the Roger Williams National Memorial in Providence, will guide the students through London's neighborhoods where Williams grew up; Essex, where he first worked and was married; and Cambridge, where he went to school at Pembroke College. They'll learn about his mentor, Sir Edward Coke, and how his experiences shaped his life. They'll also learn about his less-than-successful courtship of Sir Coke's daughter, his irrational fears of pirates and crossing the Atlantic, and his complicated relationship with Native Americans, who he sold into slavery later in life.

"I want to make Roger more human. Bringing him to life is my goal," Ms. Carrington-Farmer said.

The trip is part of the Roger Seminar, a class for first-year RWU students to learn about Mr. Williams himself, as well as the university's and town of Bristol's history. The group is scheduled to leave Friday afternoon, returning Saturday, March 18.

"My hope is that the students will take what they've learned in the Roger Seminar into this new environment and think about how issues like freedom of conscience, critical thought and tolerance find their relevance over time," Associate Dean Jason Jacobs said in a release. "The main objective of the trip is to 'retrace Roger,' meaning to learn more about where he came from and how it was possible historically for his point of view to take shape."

The students have been doing that throughout the school year, they said Tuesday during a planning meeting for the trip. They have retraced his steps in Rhode Island, visiting historic sites in Providence and Rumford.

"It'll be good to go to England and really connect with what we've seen here," said student Meghan Rodenhiser, a freshman from Wilmington, Mass.

"Before, he was just a name," said freshman Axel Ruiz, from Worcester. "It's good to learn that these types of thoughts were around back then - religious freedom, sanctuary."

The trip will take students to such sites as the Tower of London, Cambridge University, Trinity College and many others. They'll also get a taste of everyday life in England, and see Shakespeare's "Othello" at the famed Globe Theatre.

School officials to present $60M budget request

Public hearing on spending plan scheduled for Thursday, 7 p.m. at Mt. Hope High School

BY PATRICK LUCE
pluce@eastbaynewspapers.com

The Bristol Warren Regional School District will present a nearly $60 million budget request at the Joint Finance Committee meeting Thursday. If approved, Bristol and Warren taxpayers would pay 4 percent more for schools.

The budget for the 2017-2018 school year, if approved, would increase spending in schools by more than $3 million over the fiscal 2017 spending plan, most of which — $2.8 million — would be spent on improvements to school buildings and grounds. There were no capital expenditures in the current budget.

The bulk of the budget — more than $42 million — is earmarked for salaries and benefits for school district employees. Salaries have increased by 2.4 percent — $700,000 — and benefits went up 1.7 percent, or $200,000.

Just more than $8 million is set aside for "purchased services," including transportation and tuition costs, each at $2.5 million.

Supplies and materials take up $1.6 million, which is actually a $148,000 decrease from the current year. The school district is also responsible for paying $2.6 million in debt service on past loans.

Repairs to school buildings and grounds are budgeted to cost $11.7 million, $7.5 million of which will be reimbursed by the state Department of Education. Some repairs are planned at each school in the district. The most expensive projects include refurbishing the athletic fields at Mt. Hope High School ($2.7 million), replacing acoustical ceiling tiles at Kickemuit Middle School ($1.4 million), replacing boilers at Guiteras School and Kickemuit ($1 million), replacing bleachers in the Kickemuit gym ($985,000), and repaving the parking lot at Hugh Cole School ($700,000).

The budget would be funded mostly by the towns of Bristol and Warren, which would contribute $36.6 million, an increase of 4 percent over last year's $35.2 million. More than $14 million would come from the state funding formula. The rest is made up with various state aid and a $2.8 million fund balance for capital projects.

The amount each town would pay into the district is still up in the air as a lawsuit on education aid is pending before the state Supreme Court. Last year, Bristol contributed $25 million, while the smaller Warren paid $10 million. In early 2015, a Rhode Island Superior Court judge ruled that Warren had been paying too much, and Bristol too little, in education aid to the Bristol Warren Regional School District. After the ruling came down, Bristol appealed that decision to the state Supreme Court.

Arguments in the appeal are scheduled to begin Thursday. A loss at the Supreme Court is likely to cost Bristol taxpayers as much as $2 million a year.

POLICE REPORT

'Suspicious' characters, street furniture, bridge walker

The Bristol Police Department responded to the following calls between Feb. 27 and March 5:

Monday, Feb. 27

Police responded to town ordinance violations of an unregistered car on Wall Street and a couch on the sidewalk on Wood Street. The car was in the process of being donated, and the couch owner agreed to move the furniture.

A man in an orange vest claiming to be from "Town Square Energy" had no credentials while soliciting business on Corte Real Drive around 2:30 p.m. He was dispersed and informed of the town ordinance prohibiting solicitation without a permit.

Tuesday, March 28

John Manuel Almeida, 42, of 2 Scott Lane, Bristol, was arrested on a Superior Court bench warrant for failure to appear in court on a previous charge of disorderly conduct. He was taken into custody at 5 a.m. on Metacom Avenue.

Matthew D. Waddell, 29, of Hope Street, Bristol, was charged with domestic assault after [police were called to the area for reports of a domestic disturbance at 8:30 a.m.

Officers responded to a narcotics report at Mt. Hope High School at 11:20 a.m. Police filed a report but no arrest was made.

A car was reportedly vandalized on Captain Street.

Conceito Medeiros, 51, of 380 High St., Bristol, was arrested on a 6th District Court bench warrant.

A woman wearing a yellow sweatshirt, gray sweatpants and brown boots was walking on Mt. Hope Bridge at 8 p.m. Portsmouth Police met her on that side of the bridge, which is off limits to pedestrians.

A group of men were reportedly yelling and screaming in the road on First Street just after 9 p.m. They were gone when police arrived.

Wednesday, March 1

Amber Nolan, 19, of 5 Algonquin Drive, Middletown, was arrested on a 6th District Court bench warrant for failure to appear for her arraignment on a previous charge of domestic violence. She was arrested after a passer-by flagged an officer down on Franklin Street at 1:30 p.m.

A bicycle was reportedly stolen on Hope Street just before 3 p.m.

Thursday, March 2

Jonathan J. McGinn, 22, of 31 Pearse Ave., Apt. 1, Bristol, was arrested on two bench warrants for failure to appear in court on previous charges of taking shellfish from polluted waters and obstructing a police officer.

Matthew Chauvin, 34, of 8 Rosita Ave., Bristol, was arrested on a 6th District Court bench warrant for failure to appear.

A car was reportedly speeding on Sousa Street around 10 p.m., according to a caller. The car was gone when officers arrived.

Friday, March 3

Nicholas D. Marine, 29, of 21 San Jose Drive, was cited for drinking alcohol in public.

A suspicious man wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt was reportedly spotted in the woods behind homes on Elbow Street at 11 a.m. He was gone when officers arrived.

A caller reported seeing a suspicious black pickup truck with white hubcaps on Poppasquash Road around 5 p.m. Police could not find the truck. There was no indication what made the caller think the truck was suspicious.

A resident on St. Elizabeth Street called police because neighbors were making too much noise walking home around 11:30 p.m. There was no problem.

Saturday, March 4

Police investigated several suspicious activity reports between midnight and 2 a.m. at Independence Park, the Mt. Hope Boat Ramp, on Tupelo Street and on Hope Street. There were no arrests made.

A resident on High Street complained of a neighbor's loud music at 10 a.m. There was no music when police arrived.

State police charge Bristol man with fraud, counterfeiting

BY MIKE REGO
mrego@eastbaynewspapers.com

The owner of Hot Rides Auto Sales in East Providence has been charged with providing fraudulent documents to a state agency when attempting to renew his dealership license, the Rhode Island State Police announced Thursday afternoon, March 2.

Kenneth A. Andrade, 52, of 2 Pawtucket Ave., Bristol, was arrested February 23 and charged with forgery and counterfeiting, a felony, and providing a false document to a public official, a misdemeanor, according to RISP Detective Commander Major Dennis Fleming.

The major's report said Mr. Andrade, owner of Hot Rides Auto Sales, located 30 Veterans Memorial Parkway, East Providence, allegedly submitted a fraudulent retail tax permit and a fraudulent "letter of good standing" as part of his request to renew his Motor Vehicle Dealer's License through the Rhode Island Division of Motor Vehicles.

The Dealer's License Investigator suspected irregularities in the documents and notified state police, Major Fleming's report continued.

Based on an investigation by the State Police Automobile Theft & Insurance Fraud Unit, detectives obtained a warrant for Mr. Andrade's arrest, Major Fleming said. He was arrested on February 23 and was arraigned in Third District Court.

Mr. Andrade was released on personal recognizance, pending further court action, Major Fleming's report added.

Shellfishing was temporarily banned in parts of the bay last week due to a toxic algae bloom, a rarity in winter.

Toxic algae bloom makes odd February appearance

Shellfishing banned in Westport, lower Sakonnet, lower bay; "disconcerting," RWU professor says

BY BRUCE BURDETT

bburdett@eastbaynewspapers.com

The state issued yet another harmful algae bloom alert last Wednesday. This one forced a shellfishing ban from Gooseberry Neck in Westport clear across southern Rhode Island waters to Point Judith. The ban includes the lower Sakonnet River south of Black Point and lower Narragansett Bay south of the Jamestown and Newport bridges.

Such bans are nothing new — there was a similar one here in early October — but in February?

"That is a little disconcerting," said Dale Leavitt, associate professor of biology at Roger Williams University. "I have never seen this here at this time of year."

The culprit in this instance is a phytoplankton called pseudo-nitzschia, said Angelo Liberti, chief of surface water protection for the Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management (DEM). It produces a toxin called domoic acid which can be harmful to humans and which was identified in shellfish tested February 26 and 27 by DEM at five south coast locations.

The levels found were slightly below the "mandatory closure" level established by the federal Food and Drug Administration.

Mr. Liberti called it "unexpected" to find evidence of domoic acid in shellfish at this time of year.

It has been a busy few months for algae blooms here, Prof. Leavitt said. There was a highly visible series of "rust algae" blooms in late summer, followed by a virtually invisible but more toxic pseudo-nitzschia bloom in October.

As for the cause of such a bloom in February, he said too little is known to be certain. Oddly, while the bay is warmer this year than most winters — there hasn't been any ice cover to speak of — "pseudo-nitzschia is a colder water species," more typically found in Maine and points north.

While shellfishing in the effected waters is prohibited until further notice, the ban does not include carnivorous snails, such as whell and moon snails, DEM said.

The notice states:

"Impacted waters include all RI waters north of a line from Point Judith to the southern tip of Gooseberry Neck, off Horseneck Beach in Westport MA, and south from the Jamestown Verrazzano Bridge, south from the Newport Pell Bridge and south of an east/west line across the Sakonnet River lying one-quarter mile south of the pipeline found just south of Black Point. Shellfish harvested from the open portions of Harvester Tagging Areas 5B, 4A and 3W should temporarily be identified as 5B North, 4A North and 3W North."

Waters will be tested further; updates will be provided on RI DEM's web and Facebook pages.

Extreme cold may have been a factor in elderly sisters' deaths

Police: 'Foul play was not involved'

Barrington police believe extreme cold temperatures may have played a role in the deaths of twin elderly sisters early Saturday morning, March 4.

In a press release on Sunday, police stated that 97-year-old Jean Haley, of 21 Opechee Drive, and her twin sister, Martha Williams of East Providence, were found laying face down outside the home at 21 Opechee Drive. A neighbor spotted one of the women at about 8 a.m. and called 911.

Both women were immediately transported to Rhode Island Hospital but later died.

Police said an investigation revealed that Jean and Martha's younger sister — an unidentified 89-year-old Barrington resident — had accompanied the women for dinner on Friday night. All three returned back to the Opechee Drive residence at about 8:30 p.m.

The younger sister then drove home.

"At this time investigators believe that foul play was not involved and Ms. Williams may have fallen in the driveway walking to her car," stated the press release. "Ms. Haley may have tripped on a rug on the floor of the garage as she attempted to enter her house to call for assistance."

The women reportedly remained outdoors all night, as temperatures dipped well-below freezing.

"On behalf of the men and women of the Barrington Police Department, our deepest sympathies and condolences are extended to the Haley and William's families during their tragic loss, said Barrington Police Chief John M. LaCross.

Ms. Williams was a longtime resident of Barrington before moving to East Providence.

Educated investment

Up until about a century ago, students went to school through about eighth grade before leaving to work on the family farm or to get a job in a factory to help support the family. High school, which was not commonly provided by the government, was a luxury.

As technology increased and society progressed, it was determined that eight years of education was no longer sufficient to thrive in an advancing world. Local governments responded to the changing world and started extending their public education offerings by four years. Public high school was born and quickly became the standard around the country because it was necessary.

A similar situation exists today. The increasingly technological world demands higher levels of education. A college degree today is about equivalent to what a high school diploma was 100 years ago. College is no longer a luxury for most industries. It is increasingly a necessity.

So it is time for the government to again respond to a changing world by making college part of a public education.

Gov. Gina Raimondo has proposed doing exactly that. Her plan would provide two free years of post-secondary education to all in-state students. They could choose to go to the Community College of Rhode Island, earning an associate's degree at no cost, or they could pay their way through their first two years at Rhode Island College or the University of Rhode Island, finishing off the last two years of their bachelor's degree for free. Either way, students can affordably attain some college education, a boon to their career prospects and the achievement of the state as a whole.

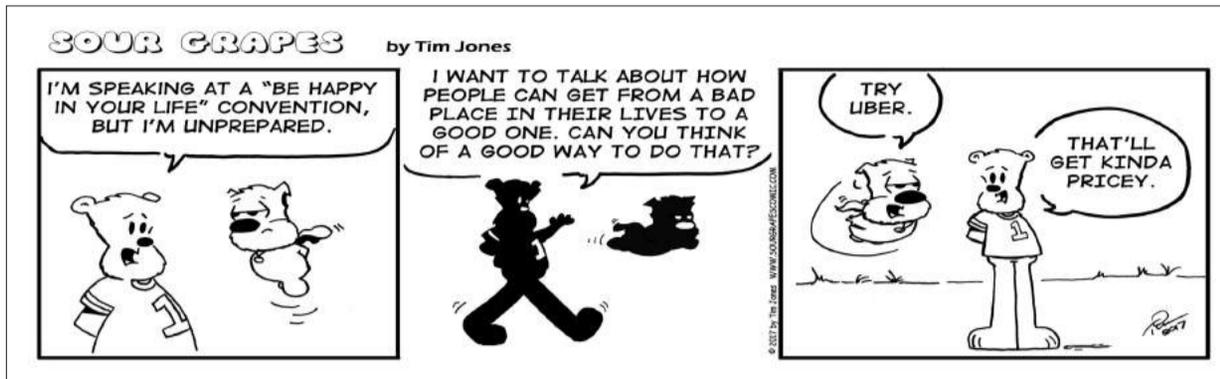

The question, as always, is what will it cost. The answer is surprisingly little. The governor's office estimates that at its most expensive, the plan will cost about $30 million a year. While that may sound like a lot of money, it is a minuscule part of the state's $9 billion budget — less than one-half of 1 percent of the state's annual spending.

The money would likely be made up in revenue growth, which has been averaging 2 percent a year in Rhode Island since the last recession ended. But even when the economy inevitably takes another downturn, eating up whatever surpluses have been gained, the state can surely find 0.3 percent worth of waste to cut in the budget in order to fund something as critical as its population's education. In fact, having a properly educated populace is the best way to shorten such an economic downturn, or prevent one altogether.

College education is no longer optional. It is an increasing necessity that all should have the opportunity to achieve, no matter what industry they choose to pursue. The state General Assembly should approve the governor's plan and allow it to take effect beginning with the class of 2017. The cost is minimal, and the benefits are monumental.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mount Hope Farm is private land, not public park

To the editor:

On behalf of the Board of Trustees of the Mount Hope Farm Trust, I am writing in response to the Speak-Out piece in last week's Bristol Phoenix saying that the farm has no right to restrict public access.

The Speak-Out person went on to say, "Just put up signs, and provide doggie bags..." The gist of the Speak-Out comments was that the farm has no right to restrict access, and is running a big profitable business and has no right to ban people from the property.

The farm is privately owned by the Mount Hope Trust. We welcome the public, but walking at the farm is a privilege, not a right. We are asking people visiting the farm who do obey the rules to help us enforce those rules by monitoring the behavior of others.

The farm was purchased in 1999 with tremendous community support, including paying a portion of the purchase price through a bond issue. Mount Hope Farm is a private non-profit and provides an extraordinary opportunity to learn, understand, explore and enjoy five centuries of American history. We are not a public park, and unfortunately some in the community are abusing our beautiful local treasure. Walkers and dog walkers alike are leaving trash on our trails.

Town ordinances state, "It shall be a violation for any person to fail to remove and dispose of any feces left by his dog on any private property and to not have on their persons a means for removal." We do provide doggie bags and strategically placed disposal sites, although we are not required to do so; this is a courtesy provided by the farm. Strangely, some dog walkers pick up after their dogs, use the bags and then throw the bags into the shrubs.

The Speak-Out person also doesn't seem to understand that dogs must be leashed. The town ordinance states, "All dogs must be kept under physical restraint at all times, i.e. leash or behind a fence." Despite both town ordinances and our rules requiring all dogs to be on a leash and all pet leavings to be picked up and removed by dog walkers, many people ignore the rules and abuse the privilege of being able to walk at the farm.

Just last week, I stopped a person walking two dogs off the leash near Cove Cabin and reminded him that dogs have to be on leashes. He objected, saying no one else was around. He and many others don't seem to understand that the farm permits them to walk there and they have to obey the farm rules. Mount Hope Farm is privately owned and is not a park or public property.

As a non-profit, the farm counts on donations and friends of the farm for support. Most people who walk at the farm do not provide any financial support, so it is especially unfortunate that they abuse the farm.

Despite the Speak-Out person claiming that the farm "has enough money," we depend on donations and grants to repair our buildings and offer services. We welcome anyone to become a supporter of MHF by going to our website and donating or becoming a member: mounthopefarm.org.

Last year, volunteers and master gardeners at the farm grew more than 1,600 pounds of vegetables which were donated to the food bank at no cost. We have a number of free or low-cost programs that benefit the community.

We encourage those people who walk the farm's fields and paths to help us enforce the rules. Please take a picture of anyone whose dogs are running loose or who flings plastic bags of dog waste into the farm's trees and email to: Info@mounthopefarm.org. Thanks for supporting the farm!

SPEAK-OUT

No need for more than a week of school vacation

As a full time working parent, I FULLY SUPPORT THE ONE MARCH VACATION. Our kids have a long Christmas vacation that we struggle to find day care for, there are many three-day vacations in January and February that require us to find day care for, plus we need to find daycare for all the summer weeks. It's about time working parents are finally given a little break. Now I only need to pay for one week instead of two. The majority of the population are not teachers. The majority of the population works 48 weeks a year with just four weeks of vacation. We, too, miss our kids and wish we could be off every day that they are, but that is not reality. I feel it is very selfish for teachers to be complaining about a one-week inconvenience for their family where we all have about 11 weeks of inconvenience, plus all those holidays, and all those teacher conference days.

East Bay girls knocked from playoffs

Eagles lose deciding game, 5-4, on Monday night

The East Bay girls' hockey co-op team was eliminated from the playoffs when it lost 5-4 in game three of a semifinal match-up against South County.

Barrington opened the series with a 1-0 win on Friday, March 3, but the South County team stormed back to win the second game 3-1 on Saturday night.

In the deciding game, the Eagles came up just short, losing 5-4. Barrington had entered the playoffs as the number three seed.

MARINA: Construction would not begin before July 2018 under council's plan trash truck and other projects. Lower priority projects in year one include improved waterfront access at Hope and Burton streets, "way finding signage" directing visitors to points of interest in town, and enhanced landscaping at Independence Park. Missing from the plan in its first year is the public marina approved in November. The marina project is tabbed for year two — beginning some time after July 1, 2018 — with a "Priority three" label, generating protest from some on the marina waiting list.

"This is very unacceptable to the majority of waitlisted individuals," said Patrick McCarthy, who said he has canvassed members of the waiting list and is serving as a spokesman for the group. "This is in defiance of the will of the Bristol voters who voted overwhelmingly for the bond referendum and immediate marina construction."

While it's true voters overwhelmingly approved the bond referendum — with 68 percent in favor — there was no timeline attached to individual projects, Mr. Calouro indicated. Indeed, the marina was just one of several projects covered by the $17 million referendum, which also approved $7 million for drainage projects, $5 million for road and sidewalk repairs, $2 million for open space acquisition and $1 million for public building repairs.

"I've said this before and so have my colleagues — just because voters approved the referendum doesn't mean we spend all the money right away," Mr. Calouro said. "It's meant to be there and be ready to do those projects when it makes sense."

That's the purpose of the Capital Improvements Program, he said — a long-term plan to help the council and town administrators "stay on target with our projects" and ensure priorities are adhered to.

"We as a council make decisions that are good for the whole town — and we believe the marina is good for the whole town," Mr. Calouro said. "There's only so much we can do at a time. There's only so much money."

Money is part of the reason work on the marina should begin immediately, Mr. McCarthy said. It is an economic stimulator that will increase visitors to Bristol, helping bring more money to the town's shops and restaurants, and enhance the quality of life in the boating-centric community of Bristol, he said. The town could also effectively promote the amenities of a brand new marina to the boating community to raise marina rates and possibly even get a multi-year commitment from boaters.

"This, in effect, wastes the next two summer boating seasons," Mr. McCarthy said, noting construction wouldn't begin until the summer of 2018 at the earliest. "This would immediately raise revenue for the town. This is a town that raises taxes all the time. How about collecting some?"

Mr. Calouro shares Mr. McCarthy's concerns regarding taxes, which is why he said the council needs to be smart in how it spends the money voters approved. Once the town goes to bond, interest rates kick in and the cost of borrowing begins.

"I understand the frustration. Everybody is chomping at the bit because it's going to be a great project," Mr. Calouro said. "Everyone is excited to move forward. We never actually committed to doing it this year."

There is also a certain amount of planning that needs to go into the marina, which has been put on hold since its original proposal. The plan called for 122 boat slips in Bristol Harbor just south of the Church Street dock behind the Robin Rug facility on Thames Street. The town has encountered some obstacles, including disagreements with Robin Rug owner Russell Karian over the town's right to attach the marina to the land behind the factory.

The marina plans will be among the subjects discussed during a public engagement meeting as part of an update to the town's Harbor Management Plan. The Harbormaster's Office and Community Development Department will host the engagement session on April 6 in Town Hall.

TOP 10: Police officers dominate the highest-paid list due to overtime, details

Bristol is in line and actually below the average pay for most top positions among Rhode Island cities and towns, according to the state Department of Revenue's Municipal Finance Division. The division released a survey last week listing the salaries of town managers, fire and police chiefs, finance directors and other administrative positions.

Mr. Contente, in his first year as town administrator, is paid $75,500 a year, sixth lowest in the state. West Greenwich's top administrator is lowest at $67,188; Newport's is highest at $178,500. Bristol's highest paid employee outside of the police department — Finance Director Julie Goucher — made less than $105,000, about the median in the state for a position that is paid more than $150,000 in Providence. Among East Bay towns, Ms.

Goucher is paid less than her counterparts in East Providence, Portsmouth and Barrington. Only Warren pays less for the position, lowest in the state at less than $70,000. (Tiverton and Little Compton do not have finance directors).

The same follows for most Bristol positions, including police chief, fire chief, building code enforcer, tax assessor, and others, all of whom make a base pay that's around or below the state average.

In fact, only Town Clerk Lou Cirillo (eighth at $80,302), Parks and Recreation Director Walter Burke (ninth at $72,250), Public Works Director Kevin McBride (ninth at $103,000) and Planning Director Diane Williamson (eighth at $86,155) — all of whom have been with the town for many years — are in the top 10 in pay at their respective positions. Police Chief Canario falls just outside the top 10 — 11th at $103,979 in base pay.

schooled kids ages 6 to 12 meets each month. The program introduces a different topic each time, with hands-on experiments and nature-based activities designed to foster a love of the natural world. Class time has been extended, which means more time for outdoor exploration, so dress for the weather!

The topic this month is "Birds of Prey and Owl Pellet Dissection" on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 14 and 15, from 1:30 to 3 p.m. Classes are limited to 15 children, so register online. An adult must attend with the child. The cost is $12 per child; $10 member children and $8 each additional sibling; $6 members.

■ "Birding: The Next Step. Part II, Taking Flight" for adults is on Tuesdays, March 14 to April 18. Delve into the lives of our feathered friends with Audubon Society of Rhode Island board member and professional ornithologist Charles Clarkson. The six-week course is part two of a series.

Topics will range from avian anatomy and physiology, the dynamics of migration, the newest technologies in ornithology, and how birds cope with a changing climate. Two weekend field excursions will be arranged. The fee is $150; $125 for members. Register online at www.asri.org.

■ "Lil Peeps" is from 9:45 to 10:45 a.m. Thursdays, March 16 to April 27 (except April 20 due to school vacation week). The popular program introduces children ages 18 to 36 months to the delights of nature through age-appropriate, hands-on activities. Along with a nature lesson, activities may include nature walks, crafts, songs and stories.

Registration is required and space is limited. Adults must accompany children and there are no refunds for missed classes. Older siblings cannot accompany the parent/child team. The fee for the six-week series is $65 a child, $82 for two siblings and $60/$76 for members. Register online.

■ "Ecuador: A Photographic Journey Exploring the Wildlife of the Andes and Galapagos" is for adults on Thursday, March 16, from 7 to 8 p.m.

Join Audubon board member Candace Powell and her husband Chris for a photographic exploration of Ecuador's wildlife, birds and unique habitats. Travel from the capital city of Quito to the snow-capped Andes Mountains to Darwin's legendary Galapagos Islands.

The fee is $7; $5 members. Register online.

■ "Butterflies and Birds," a photography exhibit by Rufus Abdullah, is at the center through April 30. The exhibit is free with admission.

on Sunday. Bid farewell to winter and welcome spring while exploring the refuge at night. Listen for signs of life and use the light of the full moon to look for animal tracks and signs while passing through the meadow, the forest and the wetland.

An Audubon educator will lead the way. The cost is $14 for adults and $7 for children; $10/$5 for members. The program is for all ages. Register online.

■ "DIY: Birdseed Bag Totes or Aprons" are on Sunday, March 12, from 1 to 4 p.m. Plastic birdseed bags are not recyclable. Instead of sending them to the landfill, repurpose them into fashionable tote bags or aprons.

Bonnie Combs from Bird Brain Designs will show you how in a do-it-yourself workshop. If you have a birdseed bag you like, bring it. (Note: aprons require large bags). The fee is $7; $5 members. The program is for teens to adults. Register online.

■ Pre-School Adventures are on Tuesdays, March 14 to April 4, from 9:45 to 10:45 a.m. Children ages 3 to 5 participate in games, hikes, crafts, songs, hands-on activities and more as they are introduced to the wonders of nature.

Adults must accompany children and there are no refunds for missed classes. Younger siblings are not permitted to attend. The fee for the four-week program is $44; $54 for two siblings ($40/$50 for members). Register online. Space is limited to 10 children.

Army veteran, electrical engineer

Thomas D. Conlon III, of Fall River, Mass., passed away Wednesday, March 1, 2017 at his home, surrounded by his loving family. It was his 66th birthday. He was the husband of Katherine B. (Hurley) Conlon, to whom he had been married for the past 40 years.

Born in Fall River, a son of the late Thomas D. Conlon Jr. and Eileen (Giblin) Conlon, he was a lifelong resident of the city. A graduate of Coyle High School, he received his degree in electrical engineering from the Franklin Institute in Boston and was a veteran of the United States Army.

Tom was a master electrician and proud member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, local 223. His nearly 50-year career took him from downtown

Thomas D. Conlon III

Fall River, to Boston's Big Dig, to Europe, Africa and beyond.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by two sons, Thomas D. Conlon IV and his wife Elizabeth Daigle-Conlon of New York City, and Kevin P. Conlon of Atlanta, GA; one daughter, Brigid K. Conlon of Providence; seven sisters, Mary Beth Boyd of Fairhaven, Mass., JoAnne Conlon of Maui, HI, Barbara Conlon of Dartmouth, Mass., Cynthia Conlon of Madison, Conn., Eileen Conlon of Ottawa Hills, Ohio, Cathleen Parker of Martha's Vineyard, Mass., and Kelly Sleight of Dartmouth; two granddaughters, Quinn and Olive Conlon of New York City; and many nieces and nephews. He was the brother of the late Mark J. Conlon.

His funeral was held Monday, March 6, 2017 at 8 a.m. from the Waring-Sullivan Home of Memorial Tribute at Cherry Place, 178 Winter St., Fall River, followed by a funeral Mass at 9 a.m. at Holy Name Church, 709 Hanover St., Fall River.

In lieu of flowers, contributions in his honor may be made to the Veterans Association of Bristol County, 755 Pine St., Fall River, MA 02720. Burial in St. Patrick's Cemetery, Fall River.

Ask the Expert—Planning Ahead

Christy Bergeson

Licensed Funeral Director, Wilbur-Romano Funeral Home

Q: What's the best advice you would give someone about funerals?

A: Very simply: be prepared. I don't mean merely to expect to have a funeral or mention your final wishes to your spouse, but to plan everything in advance—and in detail—with the help of a professional. The most difficult thing we see is families who are not prepared for the loss of a loved one. The surviving family members are forced to create a plan while they mourn, which can make an emotional situation worse. A plan can help your loved ones to better cope with the loss, allowing them to focus on what's most important. And, you can feel comfortable in knowing that your personal wishes are known.

OBITUARIES

Beloved patriarch, Rumford Little League volunteer

Joseph D. McLaughlin Jr., 83, formerly of Providence and Rumford, whose big personality, gift of connecting with people, and ability to tell boisterously funny stories, passed away at St. Elizabeth Manor, Bristol, on March 3, 2017. Joe was the husband of the late Lois Steiner McLaughlin, whom he loved and adored, and to whom he showed great devotion in her final illness. They were married for 55 years before her death in 2013.

Born in Providence on June 9, 1933, he was the son of Joseph D. McLaughlin, Sr., and Florence Dealy McLaughlin, and the younger brother of Margaret McLaughlin and Florence Stein. Joe grew up on Roslyn Avenue in Providence, attended St. Pius School, and was a graduate of LaSalle Academy, class of 1951. He received his BS in Economics from the University of Rhode Island in 1955 and was commissioned as an officer in the US Army through ROTC. Joe served on active duty for two years, spending the majority of his time in Korea. He served in the Army Reserves for six years following his discharge in 1957.

A salesman's salesman, Joe worked during his early career for Sears Roebuck in Framingham, Massachusetts, Montgomery Ward in Schenectady, New York, and the Wickes

Joseph D. McLaughlin Jr.

Corporation in Saginaw, Michigan. At that last position, he was the national sales director for appliances. Returning to Rhode Island in 1969, Joe was for 15 years the owner and operator of Heater Repair and Supply, a heating and plumbing wholesale business located in Providence and East Providence. For several years, he also operated an Irish import business. That business grew out of Joe and Lois's trips to Ireland, a beloved destination.

For the final 20 years of his professional life, Joe was an independent manufacturer's sales representative in the heating industry, working with businesses based both in the United States and Canada. His work took him across the country, and he was a well-known figure in home heating industry circles. His reach in New England in particular was extensive, and there was hardly a stove shop in the smallest village that he did not know or have a connection. Joe was a master storyteller whose humor was inclusive and never mean-spirited, and these qualities made his sales calls a welcome event.

Married in 1957, Joe and Lois lived for 35 years in Rumford, where they raised six children, before retiring to Lady Lake, Florida, in 2004. During their years in Rumford, Joe was active in youth sports, volunteering for many years as a coach in the Rumford Little League. Their house was also a welcome and familiar destination for family and friends of all ages. Possessor of a half-glass full optimism that guided him through life's challenges, after his retirement Joe twice competed in the national Senior Games in both the 1.5K and 5K race-walk events.

A believer in the wealth contained in families, Joe took pride in the successes of his children and was overjoyed by the arrival of his grandchildren. He is survived by Mark and his wife Laurel of Rehoboth and their children Catherine, Maisie and Tess; Micheal and his wife Amy of Brooklyn and their son Jasper; Kevin and his wife Cary of Manhattan and their son Dominic; Christopher and his wife Steff of Cary, North Carolina, and their children Jake and Lexi; John of Providence; and Kerrin Callahan and her husband Tom of Little Compton and their children Charlie and Lily.

Arrangements will be private. The family cannot express enough gratitude to the staff of St. Elizabeth for the skill, sensitivity and love with which they treated Joe over the past year. Contributions in Joe's memory to St. Elizabeth Manor, 1 Dawn Hill Rd, Bristol, RI, 02809, would be deeply appreciated.

Helen Oser Miller

Chose family life over modeling, acting career

Helen Oser Miller, born in Boston to immigrant parents, was raised in a cold-water flat in a Boston coal yard, learned the joys of singing and acting in public schools and modeled at Jordan Marsh. Helen would be offered a Hollywood studio contract in the 1940s but chose a private, family life.

Helen would marry Boston lawyer David Miller. Together with their children they would live in Boston, Bristol, RI, Palm Beach, Fla., and San Antonio, Tex. Although their homes were the scenes of visits with actors, politicians and business leaders, Helen most enjoyed her time with family and friends.

David would become a premier community developer in eight states during the 1940s-60s and was offered an ambassadorship by LBJ. Helen became a known hostess and contributor to charitable organizations. Three children, Robin Holbrook and Brant Miller of San Antonio and Jay Miller of San Antonio and Little Compton, survive as well as an extended family.

Helen passed away January 30 at the age of 93 in Little Compton, RI. A memorial will be held in San Antonio and later in Little Compton. Please remember Aphasia research, veterans' needs and police families for charitable gift-giving.

What to do when someone dies - family, financial and legal

Can there be a more devastating and confusing time than when a loved one dies? What should you do? How quickly should you do it? Call Attorney Evelyn Zawatsky. She has prepared a helpful list of actions you will need to take -- some immediately, some later on, and some with legal guidance. She is ready to help through the process.

- Consider donation of body organs and tissue.
- Contact place of worship.
- Contact funeral home.
- Determine whether decedent had a safe deposit box.

- Determine whether decedent left a will.
- Phone the Social Security office and notify them of the death.
- Ascertain the decedent's assets and liabilities, including the following: real estate, household goods, furniture and personal belongings, stocks and bonds, insurance policies, retirement funds, business interests, bank accounts, and debts and liabilities, including monthly bills and invoices that come in the mail after a death.

• Keep records of all payments for funeral and expenses for last illness and retain receipts.

- Investigate other benefits that may be available to this estate, including insurance policies, social security benefits, union death benefits, veteran's benefits, and employee benefits, such as accrued vacation pay, final wages, employee death benefits, reimbursements, refunds on insurance or cancelled subscriptions.
- Obtain death certificate.

Then, there is the matter of probate, which may or may not be necessary. Legal assistance can be very helpful with probate in order to transfer the decedent's assets to the persons named in the Will or trust, or the decedent's legal heirs.

A call to Attorney Evelyn Zawatsky upon the death of a loved one is an important first step in guiding you through this trying time.

Pouring on the flavor

Motivated by an evening of dull drinks, Paul Kubiski of Barrington launched Bootblack Brand, a line of complex cocktail and soda syrups, that he produces at Hope & Main in Warren.

Bootblack brand cocktail and soda syrups are taking the classic cocktail in a delicious new direction

BY CHRISTY NADALIN
cnadalin@eastbaynewspapers.com

There are a couple of definitions for the word "bootblack", which also happens to be the name of Paul Kubiski's brand of small batch complex cocktail and soda syrups. The first, of course, is a shoeshine. "The second definition is an untrained person," said Kubiski. "That's me."

Kubiski is modest — he's actually an expert. He knows what he likes in a good cocktail, and a handful of years ago, he knew he wasn't finding it. "Like a lot of businesses, Bootblack was born at the end of a bar," he said. Out for drinks, he and some friends found themselves overwhelmed by the cocktails on offer, so he decided to take matters into his own hands. He started to create his own mixers at home, sharing with family and friends.

They were very well received. Friends suggested that there was a market for Kubiski's product, but there was one catch: the Pawtucket-raised Barrington resident had no food manufacturing or service experience. Trained in sculpture and design, he was (and still is) a principal at Firebox Creative, a graphic design firm he launched with this wife, Jacqueline Duhamel.

Necessity may be the mother of invention, but in reality, it takes just a little more than that to bring a new product to the table. Kubiski's attitude certainly played a part. "I figured, why not? If nothing else, it will be a fun project," he said. "Whether something is a hobby or work, you have to be invested in it."

As it has for so many other small local food producers, Hope & Main, Warren's food business incubator, was there to give Kubiski a hand up.

Bootblack was licensed in May, 2016 and by August their original product, Ginger Cardamom Lime, was being sold in 20 locations, including bars, restaurants, liquor and gift stores. Kubiski has since added another product, Cranberry Jalapeño Lime. Not long after, he connected with the Craft Beer Guild of Rhode Island, a local liquor distributor, and was soon in 60 locations. A recent relationship with a distributor that covers the Cape and eastern Massachusetts will expand Bootblack's reach even further.

"It's not a product you buy every week; it's got a long shelf life and a little goes a long way," says Kubiski. "So I really need it to be in a lot of places."

The word "complex" is on the label for good reason: the complexity in the flavor profiles of the two products lend incredible versatility. Mixing with gin might bring out coriander notes; while cranberry will shine through when mixed with rum. Kubiski is currently working on a couple of tonics, one that would complement American gin, and another for London dry.

The mixes are handcrafted in small batches in kettles at Hope & Main's kitchens, using cane sugar and fresh ginger, rosemary, tarragon and other aromatics. They can be found locally at Grapes & Grains, Brickyard, Black Pear, and Hollies in Barrington; Imagine and Patriot Liquors in Warren; and Fresh Table in Bristol. Several local bars and restaurants are pouring Bootblack Brand; a Hot Club patron made a special trip to find Kubiski at a farmers market after enjoying the Ginger Cardamom Lime blend, and Warren's Federal Hill Pizza even has a section of their menu dedicated to Bootblack cocktails.

The nature of the product allows Kubiski to spend most of his time marketing, rather than manufacturing Bootblack. His schedule is full of tastings, events, and promotions, though one thing stays the same no matter where he is pouring: people love his product.

"People have fun making cocktails," he said. "You don't have to have a huge bar; you can play a bit with syrups and mixes, they're versatile and there's a ton of flavor."

For more info and to stay up to date on Bootblack, visit bootblackbrand.com.

LIBRARY LIBATIONS

Your local library holds the key to March (museum) madness

Welcome March! March brings hope for spring and warmer days. Cabin fever is at its peak and that frosty foe winter still blows cold winds our way. How can we pass the time before the warmth of spring? Perhaps you've begun to fill in brackets for March Madness. There's something I'm mad for but it isn't basketball. I'd say March is all about museum madness.

We are very lucky to have such wonderful museums and learning centers in our small state. It is my goal to visit them all. While I believe in supporting local business, it can get pretty expensive visiting museums between admissions and special programs. If you are as frugal as I am, you'll wonder how to save on admission to each place. Enter the library. Many libraries offer discounted passes to local museums. How does it work? Head down to your local library, hand the librarian your library card and (s)he will give you a special pass to present at the museum of your choice. Present the cashier with your pass and (s)he will apply the discount upon admission. Be sure to return the pass to your library when you're done (sometimes we are persnickety about that sort of thing).

So where to begin? I'll take this opportunity to brag about my little town of Bristol. We happen to have two mansions, an art museum and a marine museum. We boast a total of seven museums. Linden Place is one of my favorites, so much so, that I was married there in 2015. Built in 1810 by Russell Warren, this three-story Federal style mansion hosted four U.S. presidents. Step through the doors into the rich past of Bristol. Don't miss the chandelier which once hung in Buckingham Palace.

If you are willing to venture out of Bristol and head up to Boston, don't miss the Isabella Stewart Gardner museum. Only a few blocks from the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, this museum is home to more than 2,500 pieces and includes a stunning interior courtyard with statues and plant life. Before you go, be sure to check out some books about the museum. Start with "Eye of the beholder : masterpieces from the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum" edited by Alan Chong. This book features many color plates of the collection and the museum's interior. After that, check out Ulrich Boser's "The Gardner Heist". In the early 1990s, two men were able to get into the museum and stole 500 million dollars worth of art. Want to know if they were recovered? You'll have to read up! If you don't have time to read, pick up the documentary by Rebecca Dreyfus called "Stolen".

If art isn't your forte, fear not, there are even more options. If you love science, history and biology try New Bedford's Whaling Museum, Coggeshall Farm or the Audubon Society. If you love nature and prefer to enjoy fresh air and long walks, swing by the Norman Bird Sanctuary. You can walk the trails in search of woodpeckers, hawks and maybe a bald eagle (it's on their official "recent sightings" list.)

If you've been reading my columns since January, you can probably detect a theme. That little library card in your wallet is the key to many new adventures and a priceless education. In an age when irrelevant and false information spreads like wildfire, you can stop at the library for the RIGHT information. I once received a gift from an avid library patron. It was a T-Shirt that read "Google Can Find You 100,000 Answers. A librarian will find you the right one." And we shall.

Saltwater fishing license annual report shows licensees, revenues up

Last week the Department of Environmental Management (DEM) released the RI Saltwater Recreational Fishing License Program annual report. The report provides an overview of the license program including the number of licenses purchased and funds raised, how funds were spent in 2016 and the plans and initiatives planned for 2017.

The purpose of the saltwater license program as defined by state law is to provide a source of state funding for programs and activities that benefit marine recreational fishing interests in Rhode Island. Additionally, it provides a state-based alternative to fulfill the federal saltwater angler registry requirement. If Rhode Island did not have such a program, anglers (like all coastal state anglers) would have to register with the National Marine Fisheries Service. A Rhode Island state resident license is $7, the federal registration fee is $29.

Highlights of this year's report include an increase in licenses from 47,147 in Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 compared to 42,350 in FY 2015 and an increase in gross revenue with $306,125 generated in FY 2016 compared to $272,343 in FY 2015. It is important to note that state funds are spent with a three to one federal government match through US Fish and Wildlife Service Sport Fish Restoration Program funds. For example, DEM has a budget of $232,755 in spending for FY 2017, this 25 percent state of RI match would garner $698,265 in federal funds for a total RI budget of $931,020.

2017 funds will be spent on enhanced recreational fishing data collection to improve overall precision of catch estimates, the construction of a Rocky Point State Park Fishing Pier (last year the Goddard Park Boat ramp was built and the year before, the Galilee boat ramp). Funds are also allocated to maintain existing ramps and public fishing areas, continue DEM recreational fishing staff support, fish stock assessment support on important finfish, and a RI-managed fishing access survey program. The RI managed survey effort has shown outstanding results compared to federal contractors that conducted the surveys in the past. Public education, information and outreach programs are being supported in 2017 including the publication of the RI Saltwater Fishing Magazine and its waterproof minimum size and catch limit regulation insert, the funding of a youth fishing camp, and the construction of a new kiosk at the Port of Galilee for recreational fishing survey staff.

The RI Marine Fisheries Council approved the report last week recognizing that the program is in compliance with the original law's intent. Visit dem.ri.gov for a complete copy of the annual report.

Largest fishing show this weekend

The New England Saltwater Fishing Show is being held at the Rhode Island Convention Center Friday, March 10 from 1 to 8 p.m.; Saturday, March 11 from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, March 12 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The 300 exhibits include tackle, rods, reels, lures, electronics, charter guides, boats, motors, accessories, clothing and much more. The show features 60 different seminars given by expert fishermen and charter captains.

Tickets are $10 at the door; children 12 and under are admitted free. Visit nesaltwatershow.com for additional information.

Marine Council makes recreational regulation recommendations for 2017

The Rhode Island Marine Fisheries Council (RIMFC) voted on recreational fishing regulation recommendations last Monday at a meeting held at the URI Bay Campus. The Council recommendations, all public hearing input and Marine Fisheries staff recommendations will now go to Janet Coit, DEM director, for the department's final ruling on 2017 regulations.

The summer flounder (fluke) option approved by the Council was a minimum size of 19", six fish/person/day, with a season running from May 19 to December 31. This option meets required reduction levels established by the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Council (ASMFC). A declining summer flounder spawning stock biomass (SSB) has made over a 30 percent reduction in harvest limits necessary to rebuild the stock. At press time, a challenge to the Magnuson-Stevens Act (the fishing law of the nation) and NOAA's authority to manage summer flounder is underway by New Jersey. The species has been struggling. For six years the SSB has been on the decline and overfishing is occurring relative to biological reference points.

The black sea bass stock assessment is indicating that we have a healthy black sea bass fishery, however, we did overfish harvest limits last year. Like last year the council approved a 15" minimum size and a split season limit. Starting a month earlier the council approved a three fish/person/day between March 25 to August 31 and a seven fish/person/day limit from September 1 to September 21 and then a closure when the federal black sea bass season closes. The season would then open again with a seven fish limit on October 22 and run to December 31.

The Council voted to keep scup regulations status quo which is thirty fish/angler/day for private anglers with a 10" fish with special shore areas (visit dem.ri.gov for listing) allowing a 9" fish. Charter and party boats have different regulation options. Scup is not overfished and overfishing is not occurring.

Tautog reference points have not been approved at this time by the ASMFC. The assumption is that the stock status is poor based on the accepted updated assessment. More conservative regulations are expected, however, the Council approve a 16" fish minimum size with a 3 fish/person/day limit from April 15 to May 31 and from August 1 to October 14; with a six fish/person/day limit from October 15 to December 15. A ten fish/vessel limit applies to all periods which are not applicable for party and charter boats.

Striped bass stock is not overfished and overfishing is not occurring with mortality below the threshold and target. Management measures implemented in 2015 seem to be working. The council approved a status quo option for 2017, 28" minimum size and one fish/day/person with a year round season.

However, there is a move underway to liberalize striped bass regulations next season with a new addendum. The Atlantic Striped Bass Management Board of the ASMFC initiated the development of a draft addendum to the Striped Bass Fishery Management Plan (FMP) to consider liberalizing coastwide commercial and recreational regulations. This could mean more than one striped bass/person/day may be considered in the addendum draft.

Visit DEM's website (dem.ri.gov) for official news on regulations once approved by DEM director Janet Coit.

Capt. Dave Monti has been fishing and shellfishing for over 40 years. He holds a captain's master license and a charter fishing license. He is a RISAA board member, a member of the RI Party & Charter Boat Association and a member of the RI Marine Fisheries Council. Contact or forward fishing news and photos to Capt. Dave at dmontifish@verizon.net or visit his website at noflukefishing.com.

O'Connell, Clancy bring Celtic music and storytelling to Bristol

In celebration of St. Patrick's Day, Linden Place Museum is thrilled to welcome back internationally known folk singer and songwriter Robbie O'Connell for a night of authentic Celtic music and storytelling. O'Connell will be performing in the historic Linden Place Mansion parlors at 500 Hope Street in Bristol on Friday, March 10 at 7:30 p.m.

Best known for his work with the Clancy Brothers, Robbie O'Connell has performed worldwide and has most recently began working on his own solo pieces. He is a songwriter of vision, being able to take everyday thoughts and experiences and turn them into a structured folk song. Throughout his career, O'Connell has engaged audiences from Madison Square Garden to the Lincoln Center of the Performing Arts and Carnegie Hall.

Clancy & O'Connell will perform Celtic-flavored pieces, with Rose Clancy on the fiddle and Robbie O'Connell on guitar and vocals — together they create a delightful musical tapestry to celebrate the season.

Tickets for the concert are $25 for general admissions and $20 for Linden Place members, and free for Colt Circle members. The concert will include a wine reception after the performance to meet O'Connell and Clancy. This annual event tends to sell out, so reservations are recommended: please call 401/253-0390.

'Step into the Irish Parlor'

stage of the newly restored, historic vaudeville era theatre for an audience of all ages. The highlights the traveling tale of Margaret Taylor Doyle's jigs and reels from the village of Castlerea in County Roscommon. Arriving in Providence in the 1930s, Margaret and her growing family celebrated St. Patrick's Day with family, friends, and of course, dancing. Part variety show, part cabaret, and part storytelling theatre, the show always keeps Irish step dancing in the spotlight.

The new show keeps Margaret's jigs and reels and neighborhood stories in the holiday recipe, but the latest return to the "Parlor" also visits other St. Patrick's day "houses," past and present.

This time, Doyle and creative partner Mary Lee Partington take the audience on a journey of the imagination back and forth through Irish-American time to a Five Points, New York taproom to meet William Henry Lane, a free African American who may have been born in Providence in 1825, at the crossroads era between Irish step dance and American tap dance. Scenes also pay a visit to a Roscommon cottage parlor on St. Patrick's Day, as well as to a grand theatre house, Lowe's State in Providence for its popular singing competition "When Irish Eyes are Smiling."

The Roscommon Soles cast includes Kevin Doyle, his sister Maureen Doyle, and daughter Shannon Doyle. The ensemble showcases All Ireland championship fiddler and composer Sheila Falls-Keohane, director of the Gaelic Roots Series at Boston College and award-winning RI Irish flute player Joshua Kane. Pianist and violinist Cathy Clasper-Torch of The Gnomes joins Christian "Junior" Stevens of Maine, accordionist from Press Gang.

A new generation is represented to stunning effect when World Champion Irish step dancer Samuel Miller of the Goulding School of Dance takes to the stage after placing 5th in international competition in Glasgow, Scotland, last year. The cast also welcomes Erika Damiani, Director of Tir Na Nog Irish Dance at The Blackstone River Theatre and youth performers Annabel Lynch and Seamus McKeating. Making their Roscommon Soles debut are dancers Saulo Castillo, Executive Director of RawKin' RhythMix and C.J. Jefferson, along with vocalist and actor Emily Mae Partington. Mary Lee Partington joins dancer and choreographer Doyle, both of Pendragon, as artistic director and writer for Roscommon Soles. She performs as storyteller, singer, and musician. Technical services are provided by Graham Mellor, Sound Advice, LLC. Art is by Irish painter Vincent Crotty of Boston.

"Step into the Irish Parlor-St. Patrick's Day," with Kevin Doyle's Roscommon Soles is presented on Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 3 p.m., on March 11 and 12, at the Greenwich Odeum in East Greenwich. These performances are funded, in part, by a grant from RI State Council on the Arts. For further information and advance sale, reserved-seat tickets, visit greenwichodeum.com or call 401/885-4000.

Free tuition proposal is flawed

Perhaps it is because I am a trustee of a RI private non-profit university and that I attended another one, Salve Regina, but I believe that my opposition to the governor's free college tuition plan is because of my lifetime as a public interest attorney. The two final years free tuition does not benefit poorer students and the $30 million price tag is speculative. It also threatens to topple private universities whose student base is populated by a significant Rhode Island contingent. Governor Gina Raimondo's entire tuition proposal could leave higher education in shambles.

Poorer students are not helped.

The Governor's plan has no financial cap for eligibility. It is unseemly that middle class folks who paid for and who have loans for their children's education, as well as Granny and Grandpa who sacrificed for their grandchild to attend an institution of higher learning would now be asked to have their tax dollars used to benefit high income people. This isn't about class warfare: it's about equity. Presidential candidate Hillary Clinton at least had an income cap on her proposal.

Arlene VIOLET

Because the Governor's plan is a "last dollar" program, i.e. taking effect when all other available funds like the Pell Grants are exhausted, lower income students get no benefit since they can attend college already with federal monies. The "Raimondo Grants" are a bonanza for the well-heeled who have too much money for federal aid. The governor's free tuition plan is welfare for the rich and connected.

The $30 million price tag is speculative.

Curiously, it so happens that Amazon is projected to return $30 million (money the speaker would like to tap to reduce car taxes) in online sale taxes and the tuition program will allegedly cost that much. Yet, if there is a migration of students from private universities, coupled with new students, the cost will escalate. Professors in state colleges have union contracts with provisions for class size so more professors would be in the pipeline. Class space (and perhaps dorm space) would have to be constructed for the potentially additional influx of approximately 15-20 percent of students now enrolled in R.I. private institutions. In other words, the projected costs are just the floor, not the ceiling.

Private non-profit colleges will be impacted.

Some universities like Salve Regina have close to 20 percent of their students from R.I., and Providence College slightly less than that. Roger Williams University has about 10 percent. Were an exodus to occur these universities would take a direct hit on their operational costs which might threaten their fiscal health. There is no reason why, if the goal is to enhance the educational prowess of students, that the plan should only apply to public university attendance.

In sum, the Governor should go back to the drawing board and, at a minimum, put an income cap on eligibility to make it a middle class benefit. Rather than jeopardize the fiscal health of private non-profit colleges, free tuition should benefit all the in-state colleges. There should also be some provisions for in-state service, even if modeled after the Peace Corps, so that eligible students live and work here for a period of time. So many business start-ups took money from R.I during their fledgling years and then fled after they scored the benefit of the seed money. The governor is in danger of repeating the same mistake in education.

Arlene Violet is an attorney and former Rhode Island Attorney General.

World-renowned art collection a day trip away

Bristol Art Museum and Linden Place will travel to Worcester Art Museum on Thursday, March 16.

On Thursday, March 16, participants have the opportunity to visit the Worcester Art Museum, world-renowned for its 35,000-piece collection of paintings, sculpture, decorative arts, photography, prints, drawings and new media spanning 5,000 years of art and culture. View paintings by Cassatt, Gauguin, Goya, Monet, Sargent and Whistler; admire floor mosaics from the ancient city of Antioch; see cutting-edge contemporary art; and discover the Museum's many other treasures. Special exhibitions showcase the masterworks, seldom-seen gems, and important works on loan.

Enjoy an opportunity to sit back, relax and depart from Bristol for door-door service to a museum. A luxury coach is used, with restroom facilities on board, for a comfortable ride. The trip cost is $40 per person plus the cost of museum admission.

The bus departs from the municipal parking lot on Thames Street in Bristol, across from the Robin Rug building, at 9 a.m. and returns at 4 p.m. To register, please send checks to Bristol Art Museum, P.O. Box 42, Bristol RI. 02809. Please include name, address, email, telephone and emergency contact number. Museum admission of $14 will be collected, in cash only, on the bus.

Irish charmer is a joyful, musical coming-of-age story

lrego@eastbaynewspapers.com

"Sing Street" is a fun movie that refreshingly communicates the joyful exuberance of music and starting a band. In the tradition of "The Commitments" and "That Thing You Do!" it translates that youthful verve to the screen for all to share.

Set in Dublin in 1985 (and filmed there), the film is about 15-year-old Conor (Ferdia Walsh-Peelo in his first movie role). Because of money problems, his parents send him to a new school that's run by the Christian Brothers (although they're not very Christian) in a rougher part of town. Seeing a pretty girl (Raphina, played by Lucy Boynton) across from school one day, he impulsively strolls up to her, makes conversation and, when she says she's a model, asks if she wants to be in a music video for his band.

Of course, Conor doesn't have a band; but, now he has to start one – and fast! ("Do you play an instrument?") made me think of the early Beatles.) And, he's lucky enough to find Eamon, who is the McCartney to his Lennon when it comes to songwriting.

The ensemble cast, from the teens to the adults, is excellent. And, the musical numbers are catchy and very good. A music video in his imagination, set at an American prom ("Have you seen 'Back to the Future'?), is a colorful view of what he sees in his head and could create if given a chance (and a budget).

Conor has an older brother, Brendan, a college dropout, but a very astute guy. He set Conor on this path with Duran Duran's video for "Rio." As the family watches the video, their father says, "Well, it's not The Beatles is it?"

Brendan leads Conor on a musical education from band (Duran Duran, A-Ha, M, Joe Jackson, Hall & Oates and more) and offers advice for Conor to attract Raphina. A cool bit is that each song Conor writes is like a mini-homage to whichever band he's listening to at the moment.

As Conor grows up and gains confidence, he learns to see beyond his own needs and to make decisions for himself.

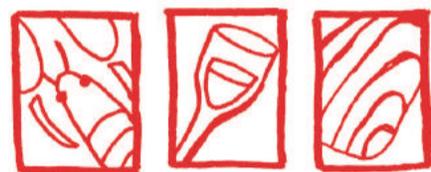

John Carney clearly remembers what it was like to be a teenager, to want to be cool and meet girls. The former frontman for The Frames also directed "Once," one of my favorite movies about music.

"Sing Street" was nominated for a Golden Globe for best motion picture - musical or comedy and won second place for Best Irish Film at the Dublin Film Critics Circle Awards. It also won an award from the Atlanta Film Critics Society for Best Song, "Drive It Like You Stole It," which was stuck in my head (pleasantly) for weeks after I saw the film.

There's a soundtrack with all the original songs from the film, bands mentioned above and hits by The Cure, Genesis, The Clash, The Blades, Spandau Ballet and more.

You need a quintessentially Irish recipe to go with this film. How about an Irish stew? And, you can make it ahead and reheat it when you want.

HEALTHY EATING

Need more hours in the day? Try these meal prep tips

Preparation is key to healthy eating — but meal prep is time consuming. Follow these tips to make meal preparation easier. You will probably save a few bucks, too!

1. Season meat three ways in one pan. The same chicken can be boring all week.

Emily DELCONTE

Use aluminum foil to divide your pan into three parts. Season each part with different spices, herbs, or sauces. Sriracha, BBQ, yogurt and dill...you can have it all!

2. Freeze blended smoothies in muffin tins. Blend up a big batch of your favorite smoothie mix. Freeze in muffin tins and store in zip-tight containers. For breakfast, blend up two to three "muffins" for a quick and easy option.

3. Chop vegetables ahead of time. Chopped vegetables will stay fresh in the fridge for three to seven days. You can chop and spiralize in advance. Then all you have to do is come home and sautee, roast, or steam.

4. Make portions clear. Portion snacks like nuts, pretzels, or roasted chick peas ahead of time in plastic containers or bags. It is best to portion when you get home from the grocery store so you can grab and go.

5. Skewer meats for quick portions. Skewer meat in four ounce servings ahead of time. Four ounces looks like a deck of cards. Skewered meat can be defrosted and cooked as needed. You can even marinate ahead of time. Just remember to soak wooden skewers in water before skewering meat. This prevents it from catching on fire during cooking.

Happy meal prepping! Check out next week's Edible for tips to make grocery shopping easier.

This recipe has dark stout in it. The alcohol burns off, but the Guinness adds a delicious depth to the flavor of the stew.

Serves 4 to 6

- 1 1/4 pounds chuck beef stew meat, cut into 1 1/2-inch pieces
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 4 cups beef stock
- 2 cups water
- 1 cup Guinness extra stout
- 1 can tomato paste
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 2 sprigs of thyme
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 3 pounds of baby Yukon Gold potatoes, cut in half

"Sing Street" (2016)

1 hour, 46 minutes

Directed and written by John Carney

- 1 large onion, chopped
- 2 carrots, chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- Flat leaf parsley for garnishing

Sprinkle a teaspoon of salt over the beef pieces. Heat olive oil in a large (6- to 8-quart), heavy-bottomed pot over medium-high heat. Pat the meat dry with a paper towel. Add the beef to the pot and cook, without stirring, until the pieces are browned on one side.

Use tongs to turn the pieces over to brown the other side. Work in batches if need be, so you give the meat enough room to brown and not steam.

Add garlic to the pot and sauté with the beef for a few seconds. Add onions and continue to sauté for a minute or so.

Pour in the beer and cook for 2 to 3 minutes.

Then, add in the beef stock, water, tomato paste, sugar, thyme, Worcestershire sauce and carrots. Stir to combine. Bring mixture to a simmer, and let it simmer for one hour.

After an hour, add the potatoes and simmer for another 40 minutes until the beef is tender and potatoes are cooked through.

Discard the thyme and serve sprinkled with chopped parsley.

The stew can be made up to five days in advance and stored in an airtight container in the fridge. Serve as-is or with a hunk of crusty bread for an extra-hearty meal.

Note: I like fewer potatoes and more carrots, but that's up to you. You can add other veggies if you want, such as parsnips or celery.

East Bay Real Estate

MEET ALLISON DESSEL: Realtor, teacher, photographer and lover of labs

BY JOAN D. WARREN
jwarren@eastbaynewspapers.com

Allison Dessel is a native Rhode Islander who grew up in Barrington. She attended Lincoln School and Brown University, and upon graduating in 1995 with a bachelor's in Psychology, Allison moved to New York City and worked in sales at Ralph Lauren and Calvin Klein before earning her master's in Teaching English at Columbia University.

Allison returned to Rhode Island in 1998, living in Providence and teaching in the Providence public school system. She moved back to Barrington, where she and her husband Bill built their home and raise their three children. In 2009, Allison and Bill opened the award-winning American Bistro, Billy's, also located in Barrington.

WHAT DID YOU DO BEFORE REAL ESTATE? "I am a high school English teacher, but after the birth of my oldest child, I stopped teaching to be at home full time. Now that my oldest child is 16 and my youngest is 10, the time was right for me to get back into the professional world."

WHY REAL ESTATE AS A CAREER? "Real estate is a great fit for me because I have deep knowledge and appreciation for the East Bay, and Rhode Island in general. My experience with education and marketing, as well as my love of people, architecture and art, all come in to play. Real estate gives me the flexibility to stay committed to my family and the causes I care about while working with an incredible team of agents and wonderful clients."

kennel and it was not uncommon to wake up in the middle of the night and find my mom had just whelped a litter herself.

"When my parents moved in to their second home, the kennel was in the back of the property and housed most of the dogs, but there were still three or four in the house.

"With respect to horses, I rode from age 8 to 17 at Bluemead Farm, which was owned by the Davis family and conveniently located right next door to us. Caring for horses instilled a great sense of responsibility and a strong work ethic. Sometimes I would be in charge of feeding, watering and turning out 10 horses in the mornings, and it was such fun. We would take the horses for walks down the road and even took them swimming at Barrington Beach. Other treasured memories involve the bay: my Dad was a big boater and fisherman and we spent many days on (and in) the water."

INTERESTS: "I'm passionate about photography and try to shoot daily. There is always something magical to see, if you just stop and take a moment to look."

PERFECT FAMILY DAY: "A perfect family day definitely starts with coffee and a walk for the dogs! If it's summer, we'll head to Narragansett, or Middletown, or to a friend's house in Newport. A perfect day also always includes Del's. On the way home we'll either have dinner or take out from Billy's. Honestly, a perfect family day to me is anytime we are together and my kids are happy and laughing. It's the simple things, and I don't take any of it for granted. Time flies ..."

BEST ADVICE: "My Dad always gave great advice, and I could go on here forever! He always told me to do my very best and never, ever quit. He would say, 'if that guy/girl can do it, so can you!' His optimism was infectious and really informed my sense of self. Except for cooking: I'm pretty sure no matter how I set my mind to it, I won't be an acclaimed chef anytime soon! Just ask my kids. One can always hope, though."

PETS: "We have two chocolate Labs: Bogey, 3 years old, and Birdie, 10 months. My husband and my son are big golfers, so that explains the golf names."

PROFESSIONAL GOALS: "To serve my client's needs to the fullest via the best possible representation and service I can give. I want my clients to feel good about their relationship with me as well as their respective outcomes. One client may be making an exciting first home purchase; for someone else, it may be mean saying goodbye to the family home or an unforeseen change in circumstances. I understand each situation is different, and will give each client unwavering care and attention so that they achieve their goals."

BEST PLACE FOR A WALK LOCALLY: "Barrington Beach, of course! It's where I clear my head and do my best thinking. We Rhode Islanders are so fortunate to have some of America's most beautiful coastline right in our state."

House of the week

Waterfront home has panoramic views of bay and bridge

Tucked in the Bristol Ferry neighborhood of Portsmouth is a large, waterfront home with one of the largest lots in the area. With 1.15 acres right on Narragansett Bay, enjoy sweeping views from this Cape Cod-style home.

This solidly built home has remained in the same family since it was built in 1954, and this is the first time it is available for sale — a rare opportunity.

With more than 3,000 square feet of living space, there is plenty of room for a growing family or extended family and friends. The bones in this home are solid, and with some updates and a personal touch, it could be the envy of the neighborhood.

Beautiful hardwood flooring and a pretty stone fireplace complement the mesmerizing water views from the living room.

The septic system for the four-bedroom house was installed in 2007, and the 200-amp electrical service was upgraded in 2007 as well. There are three full bathrooms, a rarity in a home built in the 1950s.

Although the home is on the water, the owners say the basement has never been wet. No weather event, whether it be a hurricane or 100-year flood, has ever resulted in water in the basement.

In addition, the house is in direct view of the Mt. Hope Bridge. Sit back and watch boats traverse the Bay and see the twinkling lights on the bridge at night from the privacy of your own home.

This home at 120 Bayview Ave. in Portsmouth is deceptively large, at more than 3,000 square feet of living space.

The living room has a beautiful stone fireplace and a million-dollar view of the water and the Mt. Hope Bridge.

The 1.15-acre property has sweeping views of Narragansett Bay and direct access to the water.
